

Extended Abstract Format

The 2020 compendium on PRRSV and emerging infectious diseases of swine will consist of a compilation of brief research papers covering all aspects of PRRS and swine infectious diseases. Publication in the compendium will not preclude publication of the material in a peer-reviewed journal.

Deadline: September 15, 2020

Submission Format:

- Format: Submit as a single-spaced, MS Word document with 1" margins and 12-point Times New Roman font. The maximum word limit will be 1500 words not including references. Figures and tables can be embedded within the text as appropriate. Authors are encouraged to provide figures with a minimum resolution of 300dpi, depicting valid statistical analysis.
- Title and Authors: Center the title in all capital letters (14 point, Bold, Times New Roman). Center the author(s), full first and last name, use 12pt Times New Roman, followed by affiliations and email contact information for the corresponding author. Include 5-6 keywords in the title page.
- Abstract: Limit to 250 words. No specific format is required but a concise and clear abstract conveying the significance of the work, methods used, results and conclusions is required.
- Body of the paper: The manuscript can be formatted according to the author's preference or using merged sections. To avoid compromising the clarity of the information, a journal format is recommended, which includes an introduction, methods, and results and discussion. Conveying the importance of the research and findings is expected and required.
- Acknowledgements: Include acknowledgments and financial conflict of interest statements at the end of the narrative.
- References: References should be limited to a maximum of 15. Follow the "Numbered" format of EndNote to format citations (same format as required in Journal of Virology).
